NOTE to persons providing oral or written testimony to the Council: Section 307(1)(I) of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act prohibits any person "to knowingly and willfully submit to a Council, the Secretary, or the Governor of a State false information (including, but not limited to, false information regarding the capacity and extent to which a United State fish processor, on an annual basis, will process a portion of the optimum yield of a fishery that will be harvested by fishing vessels of the United States) regarding any matter that the Council, Secretary, or Governor is considering in the course of carrying out this Act.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Council, SSC and AP Members

FROM: Chris Oliver
Executive Director

DATE: November 26, 2007

SUBJECT: Ecosystem Issues

ESTIMATED TIME 1 HOUR

ACTION REQUIRED

- (a) Receive update on outreach program for the Arctic FMP and take action as necessary.
- (b) ~~Report from Ecosystem Committee on AIFEP Implementation.~~ [postponed until February]
- (c) Alaska Regional Collaboration Team report.

BACKGROUND

Arctic FMP

At the June 2007 meeting, the Council directed staff to begin preparing a draft Arctic Fishery Management Plan (FMP) and draft amendments to the scallop and crab FMPs that terminate their geographic coverage at Bering Strait, and to develop an accompanying analysis that considers two options for the Arctic FMP: close the entire Arctic region to all commercial fishing, or close the entire Arctic region to commercial fishing except for the red king crab fishery that has previously occurred in the southern Chukchi Sea. The Council's June 2007 motion included a recommendation to consult with stakeholders, including Arctic communities, to present the Council's plans for developing an Arctic FMP and to seek input and suggestions for future fishery management in Alaskan Arctic EEZ waters. Also, the Council requested that staff consult with the Ecosystem Committee for guidance as necessary.

Between June and October 2007, staff developed a work plan for accomplishing the Council's requested Arctic FMP and related documents, and reviewed this information with the Ecosystem Committee. The Ecosystem Committee made several recommendations on the work plan (an excerpt from the Ecosystem Committee's minutes is attached as Item D-3(a)(1)), and the Council passed a motion in October that provided additional direction to staff (see Item D-3(a)(2)). One of the Council's requests was to review progress on outreach at its December 2007 meeting. The draft outreach program is attached as Item D-3(a)(3). Note that the Ecosystem Committee made several suggestions relating to outreach, which were adopted by the Council. Staff will update the Council at this meeting.

Contacts have been made with individuals associated with a variety of organizations to introduce the Council's intent in an Arctic FMP. These include:

- North Slope Borough (email)
- Northwest Arctic Borough (email)

- Maniilaq Association (in-person)
- Kawerak, Inc. (in-person)
- Kotzebue IRA (email)
- Eskimo Walrus Commission (in-person)
- Arctic Slope Regional Corporation (in-person)
- Norton Sound Economic Development Corporation (in-person)
- Alaska Dept. of Fish and Game, Nome (in-person)
- Petroleum Industry (BP, Conoco-Phillips, AOGA)(email)
- U.S. Coast Guard (in-person)

Presentations to regional gatherings have included:

- U.S. Arctic Research Commission
- North Slope Science Initiative

Staff have made a variety of other contacts including media interviews, a booth at the Alaska Federation of Natives convention in Fairbanks, emails or discussions with Arctic researchers, and discussions with conservation organizations. One outreach highlight was participating in a U.S. Coast Guard HC 130 reconnaissance flight over the Arctic on November 8, 2007 which included a stop in Barrow where staff accompanied Coast Guard personnel in meetings with representatives from the North Slope Borough, Arctic Slope Regional Corporation, Barrow Arctic Science Consortium, and others.

In-person discussions and presentations, and/or email exchanges, have focused on the Council process, how FMPs guide fishery management decision making, and the current schedule for developing the draft Arctic FMP and opportunities for public comment. A one-page flyer, approved by the Council in October 2007, was used to aid discussion (Item D-3(a)(4)).

A presentation to Kawerak's Board of Directors is scheduled for December 13 in Nome, and organizations who have expressed an interest in a presentation include the North Slope Borough, Northwest Arctic Borough, Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission, Eskimo Walrus Commission, and Maniilaq Corporation.

NOAA Alaska Regional Collaboration Team

According to the NOAA website, NOAA has been "working to integrate program activities while working with partners and customers— that is, by combining internal regional coordination with external regional collaboration. Regional Collaboration will engage diverse programs across the agency, as well as agency partners in each region, to address regionally-distinct priorities with the full breadth of NOAA's abilities." Background materials relative to this effort are attached as (Item D-3(c)(1)). A representative from the Alaska Regional Collaboration Team will provide a brief report on progress to date.

Ecosystem Committee Minutes

Wednesday, August 22, 2007 1pm-4pm
2nd Floor Conference Room, Ted Stevens Marine Research Institute, Juneau, AK

Committee: Stephanie Madsen (chair), David Benton, Jon Kurland, Jim Ayers (teleconference), Diana Evans (staff), Chris Oliver (staff), Bill Wilson (staff)

Others participating included: Joe McCabe, Lauren Smoker, Melanie Brown, Lew Quierolo, Chris Krenz, Jon Warrenchuk

The Ecosystem Committee discussed the three items on their agenda. The next Committee meeting is targeted to occur between the October and December Council meetings, tentatively during the first week of November, 2007.

Arctic FMP

Mr Wilson introduced the Council's June 2007 motion to develop an Arctic FMP that generally closes all waters north of the Bering Strait to commercial fishing, and the Council's charge to the Ecosystem Committee to help staff develop the FMP. Mr Wilson discussed his work plan for this project, including the timeline and approach, and a draft outline of the FMP. Mr Wilson also presented a community outreach plan for the project, prepared by Ms Nicole Kimball (Council staff), and some informational material on the Arctic.

With regard to the workplan, Mr Wilson had flagged certain issues as needing further clarification, which the Committee addressed. Consequently, the Committee makes the following recommendations to the Council:

- That the document under development be called an Arctic Fishery Management Plan. The motion refers to an Arctic Marine Resources FMP, but the Committee believes this may be confusing as the Council would not be regulating seabird or marine mammal harvests. The document should clarify that the Council adopts the Magnuson-Stevens Act definitions of 'fish' and 'fishery', which clearly exclude marine mammals and birds.
- That final action on the Arctic FMP be targeted for June 2008, in accordance with the timeline drafted by staff.
- That Arctic fishery management proceed in a stepwise progression. The Council's first step would be expeditious implementation of an Arctic FMP that is simple and straightforward. The conditions under which fisheries might be permitted in the future, and their management, would be addressed at a later stage. Although the FMP must include the contents required by the Magnuson-Stevens Act, it need only contain the essential elements of what is required to close the area to commercial fishing (subject to the Council's options). To the extent that it is consistent with rapid implementation, the FMP may also describe the process the Council would use, at a future time, to determine the conditions under which fisheries may be opened: how will the Council involve stakeholders and communities to decide the criteria for what, when, where, and how fisheries may open, and who may participate. The actualization of this process would be the Council's second step in Arctic fishery management.
- That the Ecosystem Committee continue to oversee the development of the Arctic FMP. The Committee appreciates the opportunity to stay involved in the development of the document, and would continue to interact with Mr Wilson and the staff-level analytical team identified in the work plan. The Committee recommends that the appointment of an Arctic FMP planning team be deferred until after the implementation of the FMP, at such time when the Council is considering the conditions under which fishing might be allowed.

The Committee agrees generally with the approach presented in the work plan. Only a limited economic analysis may be required to support this action, as prohibiting the commercial fisheries effectively has no practical impact. The sociocultural analysis, describing the subsistence fabric of life in the Arctic region, will be an important backdrop for the Council's action. A thorough discussion of marine mammals, waterfowl, and seabirds should be included in the analysis. Additionally, the scallop and crab Plan Teams should be advised of the Council's intent to truncate the FMP management areas at Bering Strait, and solicited for feedback and a more definitive description of the red king crab fishery in the southern Chukchi Sea.

Regarding community outreach, the Committee approves of the proposed Community Outreach Plan, as presented by staff, but recommends to the Council the following changes:

- That staff postpone sending letters to each entity (villages, community governments, etc.), and instead begin with telephone contact with key people at the regional level. Sending an official letter without prior personal contact may be misunderstood, and first initiating some basic conversation is more likely to be effective. Organizations to begin with include the North Slope Borough, the Northwest Arctic Borough, the Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission, the Eskimo Walrus Commission, Maniilaq, and Kawerak. Staff can discuss with these organizations how further communications should proceed, and solicit their recommendations as to how to get the word out. Telephone conversations should then be followed up with a letter.
- That staff identify events or forums at which to do outreach. For example, the Council may consider staffing a booth at the upcoming Alaska Federation of Natives annual meeting, to distribute information or answer questions. The Council has also been invited to give a presentation at the Arctic Research Commission meeting in Nome this October.
- That the Council respond formally to those entities who have sent letters regarding the Arctic FMP.

The Committee also discussed Senate Joint Resolution 17, submitted by Senator Stevens on August 3, 2007. This resolution proposes that the US should, as a matter of policy, support efforts to halt commercial fishing in the high seas of the Arctic Ocean, until international agreements to manage migratory, transboundary, and straddling Arctic fish stocks are in place. This resolution, if it passes, would effectively extend to international waters the Council's proposed action in US Arctic waters, namely to halt fishing until such time as an appropriate management framework, supported by adequate scientific knowledge, is in place.

Council Motion
Arctic Fishery Management Plan
October 7, 2007

The Council recommends development of a comprehensive fishery management plan (FMP) and environmental assessment for the Arctic Management Region defined in the staff discussion paper (north of Bering Strait). This FMP should accommodate existing fisheries in that region. The Council also supports the proposed outreach plan and recommends that staff consider specific outreach during AFN and other seasonal gatherings of northern region community members. The Council recognizes that letters to communities and other entities may be appropriate as part of the outreach program.

The Council also supports these recommendations from the Ecosystem Committee:

1. That the document under development be call an Arctic Fishery Management Plan.
2. That final action on the Arctic FMP be targeted for June 2008.
3. That Arctic fishery management proceed in a stepwise progression. The Council's first step would be expeditious implementation of an Arctic FMP that is simple and straightforward. The conditions under which fisheries might be permitted in the future, and their management, would be addressed at a later stage.
4. That the Ecosystem Committee continue to oversee the development of the Arctic FMP.

The Council clarified the schedule for development of the Arctic FMP:

- December 3-11, 2007, Council meeting in Anchorage – Additional review of FMP outreach plan
- February 4-12, 2008, Council meeting in Seattle – Preliminary review of FMP analysis and draft FMP
- April 1-8, 2008, Council meeting in Anchorage – Initial review of FMP analysis and draft FMP
- April to June 2008 – Ongoing public review of FMP analysis and draft FMP language
- June 2-10, 2008, Council meeting in Kodiak – Final review of FMP analysis and Council approval of FMP
- After the June 2008 meeting, the Council would send its recommended FMP to the Secretary of Commerce for review and approval. Prior to approval by the Secretary, a public comment period would be noticed in the Federal Register.
- 2009 – Anticipated date when the Arctic FMP would be effective

Motion passed 10/0.

Proposed Community Outreach Plan for Arctic FMP

Background on the need for a community outreach plan

At its June 2007 meeting, the Council notified the public that it intends to draft a Fishery Management Plan (FMP) for the Arctic. As part of the development of that FMP, the Council intends to conduct an outreach program. As specified in the Council's motion:

Staff should consult with stakeholders to the extent practicable, including Arctic communities, outlining the Council's intent and objectives and seeking input and suggestions for future marine resource management in the Alaskan Arctic EEZ.

Prior to its June 2007 meeting, the Council received letters from the Native Village of Kotzebue, and the Maniilaq Association, which represents twelve communities located in Northwest Alaska.¹ The correspondence from these entities noted concern with the Council's lack of communication with communities living adjacent to the Arctic EEZ about the potential development of an Arctic FMP. Their comments on potential alternatives for an Arctic FMP were combined with a request for the Council to pursue "full consultation and input from affected communities and residents"², as well as a request to be considered for a role on an Arctic Plan Team to further develop an Arctic FMP.³

In addition, one of the Council's work plan priorities is to increase Alaska Native and community consultation, and an outreach plan is currently being developed for review by the Council. As stated in the work plan, it is intended to be implemented through two specific goals: 1) develop a protocol or strategy for improving the Alaska Native and community consultation process; and 2) develop a method for systematic documentation of Alaska Native and community participation in the development of management actions. This outreach program for the Arctic FMP, then, is part of the Council's evolving outreach efforts to improve communications with Alaskan Natives and rural communities.

Native & community outreach plan

The following are suggestions for an outreach plan to be implemented during the development of the Arctic FMP. Council staff would oversee this plan and maintain ongoing and proactive relations with Native and rural communities.

Identify coastal communities within the North Slope Borough, Northwest Arctic Borough, & Nome Census Area that are adjacent to the action area (Chukchi Sea and Beaufort Sea)

Identify regional and village corporations, community governments, or other community or Native entities in each of those communities (e.g., regional nonprofits, etc.). See attached draft list.

Identify contact information for each of those entities.

Contact (by letter) and solicit input from each entity identified as being potentially affected by the proposed action, prior to the release of the preliminary analysis. Send letter in August 2007. Include in letter:

- New brochure on Council process: Navigating the North Pacific Council Process
- June 2007 Council motion on Arctic FMP
- Schedules for action

¹Member villages of the Maniilaq Association include Ambler, Buckland, Deering, Kiana, Kivalina, Kobuk, Kotzebue, Noatak, Noorvik, Selawik, Shungnak, and Pt. Hope.

²Letter from H. Bolen, Maniilaq Association to S. Madsen, NPFMC. May 25, 2007.

³Letter from A. Whiting, Native Village of Kotzebue to S. Madsen, NPFMC. May 25, 2007.

- Summary of action (1 pg flyer) that can be easily distributed in community

[NOTE: The Ecosystem Committee recommends that staff postpone sending letters and instead make verbal (telephone) contacts with key individuals at the Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission, the Eskimo Walrus Commission, the North Slope and Northwest Arctic Boroughs, Maniilaq, and Kawerak. Staff would discuss with these individuals how best to communicate with villages and other entities in the Arctic, and how to get the word out on the Council's intent.]

Convene meetings as necessary and appropriate during the development of the analysis. This step may only be necessary if it is determined that the action has significant, unique, or substantial direct effects on a particular community. This could also be prompted by strong desires from individual communities that they have an opportunity for face to face discussion of the proposed action outside of the Council meetings or FMP Team meetings. [NOTE: The Ecosystem Committee mentioned that staff might consider outreach via the Alaska Federation of Natives annual meeting and participation in an upcoming Arctic Research Commission meeting.]

If an Arctic FMP Team is formed, consider representation from an Alaska Native and/or community entity representing each of the three boroughs in the action area. [NOTE: The Ecosystem Committee recommends that an Arctic FMP Team not be appointed at this time; rather, the Ecosystem Committee would guide development of the Arctic FMP. The Team would be appointed at such time in the future when the Council wishes to consider the framework under which a fishery might be opened in the Arctic, to develop the process that would determine what species might be fished, and to identify when, where, and who would be allowed to participate in any fisheries that were opened.]

Contact (by email, fax, or letter) and solicit input from each entity identified as being potentially affected by the proposed action, prior to the Council's scheduled final action (tentatively June 2008). [NOTE: The Ecosystem Committee recommended making verbal contact with a few key individuals first to seek their recommendations for communications. This may involve letters or other communications with a broader audience.]

After a decision by the Council, follow-up with the potentially affected entities (by email, fax, or letter) as to the results of the Council's action. Convey that the Council's action is a recommendation to the Secretary of Commerce, and further input can be provided to the Secretary.

Document this consultation process in a short summary in the Secretarial review draft of the analysis supporting the action. Include a summary of the process undertaken to solicit input from affected entities, including solicitations for input, public meetings, and the distribution of documents. Include a brief summary of the participants and issues discussed at meetings.

The North Pacific Fishery Management Council is Developing a Fishery Management Plan for the Arctic

The North Pacific Fishery Management Council is developing a fishery management plan (FMP) that recognizes the unique resources of Arctic waters and the potential for continued climate warming trends. The Council does not currently have a fishery management plan for the Arctic region; this proposed plan would cover Federal marine waters (3 - 200 nm off Alaska) of the Chukchi and Beaufort Seas. The plan will guide the Council with respect to ecosystem-based management decisions affecting Arctic waters in the future. To date, very little commercial fishing has occurred in this region. The Council intends to be precautionary and prohibit commercial fisheries in Arctic waters under this plan until adequate knowledge is acquired upon which to make sound decisions. The proposed analysis includes an option to allow existing small scale commercial fisheries in this region, such as a reported small commercial red king crab fishery in the southern Chukchi Sea. The Council does not intend to affect local, small-scale commercial fisheries. Otherwise, no commercial fishing would be allowed under the authority of the new Arctic FMP.

The Arctic FMP will:

- create a policy that directly affects commercial fishing in Federal waters

The Arctic FMP will NOT:

- affect management of birds or marine mammals such as whales, seals, or polar bears
- regulate subsistence or personal use harvests of any fish, shellfish, bird, or marine mammal

OPPORTUNITIES FOR PUBLIC INPUT

The Council is interested in hearing from local residents and communities, as well as agencies, organizations and the general public, during the development of the analysis and prior to decision-making. Interested stakeholders are encouraged to contact the Council and/or attend upcoming Council meetings with their concerns and suggestions as the Council proceeds with this effort.

Proposed Timeline:

- December 3 - 11, 2007, Council meeting in Anchorage - Additional review of FMP outreach plan
- February 4 - 12, 2008, Council meeting in Seattle - Preliminary review of FMP analysis and draft FMP
- April 1-8, 2008, Council meeting in Anchorage - Initial review of FMP analysis and draft FMP
- April to June 2008 - Ongoing public review of FMP analysis and draft FMP language
- June 2 - 10, 2008, Council meeting in Kodiak - Final review of FMP analysis and Council approval of FMP
- After the June 2008 meeting, the Council would send its recommended FMP to the Secretary of Commerce for review and approval. Prior to approval by the Secretary, a public comment period would be noticed in the Federal Register.
- 2009 - Anticipated date when the Arctic FMP would be effective

As they are completed, working drafts of the analysis and FMP will be available at www.fakr.noaa.gov/npfmc.

Advancing NOAA's Priorities through Regional Collaboration

Regionally-Distinct Priorities & Capabilities

NOAA's regional priorities will vary based on regional needs. NOAA is already engaged in many high priority partnership activities in the regions, and this effort will strengthen its ability to support existing activities, in addition to exploring new ways to add value in the regions.

Hazard Resilient Coastal Communities

NOAA is essential to mitigating the escalating economic, environmental, and human costs of hurricanes, flooding and coastal storm surge, tsunamis, and expected long-term sea level rise. NOAA helps communities prepare for, respond to, and rebound from coastal hazards.

Integrated Ecosystem Assessments

Management of coastal and marine ecosystems will be improved by integrating physical, biological, and social data. This will offer the consistent view of ecosystem status and dynamics needed for each management sector to understand the activities and impacts of others.

Integrated Water Resource Services

NOAA has always held the nation's lead role in flood forecasting for public safety. Advanced capabilities in the broader realm of drought and water resources span agency research and operations and must be coordinated to adequately address regionally defined challenges.

NOAA's strength and capacity derive from strong collaborative ties among its programs and with its partners and customers. Through improved outreach and communications, NOAA can improve awareness and delivery of our services and also develop them from the bottom up to ensure they best serve the needs of the public. It is at the regional scale that NOAA can blend the place-based needs of customers and partners with its priorities and responsibilities as a federal agency.

Ensuring consistent, high-value services to NOAA customers is more important than ever, especially given recent public attention to the state of the oceans, the effects of climate change, and impacts of natural disasters. Improving the value and consistency of NOAA's services increasingly requires regional collaboration and service integration. Effective integration, itself, depends greatly upon improving the quality, productivity and value of our relationships with partners and customers. Strengthening these relationships also is essential to the "one NOAA" principles of improved internal communications and efficiency.

In 2002 and 2003, the NOAA Administrator established five regional pilot programs to improve coordination within the agency and raise NOAA's visibility to constituents. NOAA is now taking the opportunity to build upon these existing coordination efforts by integrating program activities while working with partners and customers—that is, by combining internal regional coordination with external regional collaboration.

Regional Collaboration will engage diverse programs across the agency, as well as agency partners in each region, to address regionally-distinct priorities with the full breadth of NOAA's abilities. As part of this effort, NOAA has identified strategic priorities to advance through regional collaboration. Each is inherently regional, involving geographically specific challenges, solutions, partners, and capabilities. Blended with regionally-distinct priorities, these areas offer the greatest potential to yield immediate benefits from regional collaboration.

Hazard Resilient Coastal Communities

Integrating NOAA's hazard prediction and response activities will help the nation's increasingly vulnerable coastal communities to prepare for, respond to, and rebound from natural disasters.

What is Resilience?

As defined by the National Science and Technology Council's Subcommittee for Disaster Reduction, "resilience" is the capacity of a system, community, or society, potentially exposed to hazards, to adapt by resisting or changing in order to reach and maintain an acceptable level of functioning and structure. This is determined by the degree to which the social system is capable of organizing itself to increase its capacity for learning from past disasters for better future protection and to improve risk reduction measures.

Why Focus on Coastal Hazards?

Our nation has the largest coast line in the world. American communities exist along the coasts of the Atlantic, Pacific, and even Arctic oceans, as well as the Gulf of Mexico and the Great Lakes. These communities are growing fast. In 2003, approximately 153 million people (53% of the nation's population) lived in the 673 coastal counties. Coastal populations have increased by 33 million people since 1980, and are expected to increase by another 12 million by 2015.

Just as coastal areas are subject to the stresses of this community growth, they are also subject to the most extreme economic and security threats that nature has to offer: hurricanes, tsunamis, contaminant releases, inundation from rising sea and lake levels, erosion, coastal storms, and associated flooding. As communities vulnerable to hazards increase in size, so do the risks posed to them. To reduce these risks, NOAA must improve internal coordination of its capabilities and external coordination with federal, state, and local authorities.

What Can NOAA Do?

NOAA believes that improving the scientific and technical foundation to support hazard resilient coastal communities is a national priority, but recognizes that both hazards and communities have unique geographic dimensions. NOAA's resident expertise in dealing with natural hazards spans a diverse set of programs, offices and laboratories. The agency must coordinate a wide range of capabilities to meet the needs of communities in specific regional contexts.

Integrating its services to meet geographically-defined outcomes will require NOAA to identify specific coastal hazard risks, assess vulnerabilities, and increase public awareness of these vulnerabilities through outreach and education activities. It will require NOAA to work with partners to develop decision support and assessment tools, technology, and information resources, as well as disseminate information to resource managers, emergency workers, and local and state decision makers and train them to utilize these tools and provide best practices.

What Are the Desired Results?

A successful effort will result in coastal communities that are capable of preparing for coastal hazard events before they occur, responding to them when they occur, and rebounding quickly and efficiently after they occur. This will depend, in turn, upon how well local and state decision makers, emergency managers, urban planners, and coastal resource managers are informed about community hazard risks and mitigation techniques and their proficiency in employing NOAA's information and decision-support tools. Such essential improvements in NOAA's service to the nation can only be achieved through better coordination of all of NOAA's expertise with regional partners.

Fishing vessels deposited on Louisiana highway by Hurricane Katrina.

Integrated Ecosystem Assessments

By holistically synthesizing and analyzing information on physical, biological, and social processes, NOAA and its partners will provide a fundamental tool for successful ecosystem-based management.

What is an IEA?

An integrated ecosystem assessment (IEA) is a comprehensive account of an ecosystem's condition, stressors and drivers, and the potential for change in response to management options. It provides a "big picture" understanding of an ecosystem, its many components and functions (including humans and human activities), how they interact with each other and change over time, as well as how these changes effect lives, livelihoods and quality of life.

NOAA and other agencies collect information on various species and ecological components, such as water quality, that act as individual 'indicators' of ecosystem health. IEAs compile, analyze and report information pertaining to multiple species, processes, and stakeholder interests. IEAs are place-based; they integrate and synthesize observations appropriate to a specific geographic area to identify trends in the ecosystem as a whole.

Why Develop IEAs?

NOAA collects a wide variety of physical, biological, and social information to fulfill its various mission responsibilities. Historically, these data were obtained to meet NOAA's requirements and support resource management or stewardship activities, such as fisheries management. However, to interpret complex interactions among physical, biological and social processes, it is necessary to link observations from many disciplines. Providing information through IEAs is more efficient than compiling all assessments by specialized areas of expertise. IEAs also promote scientific integration and evaluation of alternative explanations for observed changes in ecosystems that may not be apparent across separate assessments.

Regional IEAs are a necessary step for NOAA and its partners to implement an ecosystem approach to ocean, coastal, and lake management. They provide a framework that will foster multi-agency approaches to setting priorities, accomplishing shared and individual agency mandates, and meeting the needs of multiple stakeholders. IEAs offer a consistent view of ecosystem status and changing dynamics to inform the management sector about the activities and impacts of others.

What Can NOAA Do?

Compilation of IEAs is inherently multidisciplinary and implies collaboration across NOAA and with other partners. The process of developing IEAs requires a collaborative system, since no one agency or entity has all the information and expertise required. NOAA will develop IEAs with stakeholders to include information that would serve as the basis for more comprehensive forecasting and evaluation of management scenarios. IEAs facilitate the process of bringing diverse stakeholder groups together to consider tradeoffs inherent in making coastal and marine resource management decisions.

What Are the Desired Results?

IEAs should forge stronger links among stakeholders, managers, and the research community. A dynamic, web-based IEA would include indices that are updated regularly and automatically, and ecosystem component- and community-specific elements updated periodically. It would be accessed by researchers for data products for models and assessments. In addition, managers and the public would review current ecosystem status to consider uncertainties and possible risks associated with specific management decisions.

Integrated Water Resource Services

Through collaborative monitoring, prediction, risk assessment and communication, programmatic integration within NOAA and engagement with its partners will improve regional responses to periods of sustained drought and flood.

What are Integrated Water Resource Services?

NOAA must provide America's water resource and ecosystem managers with a dramatically greater amount of analytical and predictive information than it currently does. A modern vision for NOAA must look beyond the traditional river-focused forecast services toward broader drought and water resource services that extend into the watersheds, where people live and work.

An enhanced water information program would include research and development that yields models that couple freshwater, coastal, estuary, lake, and ocean waters. Integrating erosion, flood, riverine, hydrodynamic, wind, lake and ocean circulation, storm surge, and related processes will greatly improve hydrological forecast capabilities and our ability to manage national and global water resources. It is also a valuable first step toward integrating all of NOAA's weather, water and climate services.

Why Integrate Water Resource Services?

Water availability is internationally acknowledged as the great challenge of the 21st century. Regions in which water was once plentiful are now experiencing shortages. The National Research Council indicates that "in this century, the United States will be challenged to provide sufficient quantities of high-quality water to its growing population." Our freshwater supply is critically stressed by growing and migrating populations, urbanization, and climate change, especially along the coasts. The Great Lakes, which hold 90% of the U.S. freshwater supply, are at severely low levels, prompting U.S. Governors and Canadian Premiers to limit water diversion actions.

The Western Governors Association estimates that economic losses arising from the drought in the west are "billions of dollars." The 2006 report of the Western Governors Association stresses that "there is a need for more and better water information, specifically data on water use, efficiencies and water availability, to facilitate decision making. While there exists a substantial amount of data on streamflows, there is less data and less reliable information related to water quality, ground water, and rural water supplies. Funding the research, development and application of new water-resources-related technologies and fostering technology transfer opportunities are important to more efficient water resources management."

What Can NOAA Do?

To meet our nation's drought and water resource needs, NOAA must place priority on modernizing its water science and services, linking climate and ecosystem models, and increasing partnerships and education. All of this must be founded upon an agency commitment to support, at the regional-level, information exchange and knowledge transfer that transcends the traditional boundaries among NOAA divisions and among NOAA, its partners and customers.

What Are the Desired Results?

When these goals are achieved, NOAA partners and customers will be able to draw upon an expanded set of higher quality water resource services for drought and water resource management. They will have a better understanding of how water resource and aquatic ecosystem services tie into regional social and economic benefits. Through better communication and coordination, water agencies will be better equipped to meet their mission goals.

Excessively dry conditions increase communities' vulnerability to wildfires.

Collaborating with NOAA's Regional Partners and Customers

Effective regional service integration depends greatly upon improving the quality, productivity and, hence, the value of our relationships with partners and customers – particularly our support for policy-makers and public administrators.

Collaboration through Regional Outreach and Communications

NOAA envisions “an informed society that uses a comprehensive understanding of the role of the oceans, coasts, and atmosphere in the global ecosystem to make the best social and economic decisions.” Achieving this vision requires more than accurate and reliable scientific information; it also requires a knowledgeable public that understands that information, effectively applies it, and actively helps NOAA to further develop information and management services.

To this end, NOAA must make better use of the knowledge that regional partners and customers have of their own circumstances and challenges. Additionally, NOAA must enable and encourage regional partners and customers to make better use of existing capabilities and take an active role in developing and applying new capabilities.

Regional outreach and communications build awareness of place-based environmental issues and the products and capabilities that NOAA and its partners can bring to bear on them. Conversely, it ensures that NOAA understands its customers' needs and incorporates them into decisions about new, integrated products and delivery systems. Through regional outreach and communications, NOAA engages in a dialog about what problems are most important, what information is needed, and which solutions are appropriate. Outreach and communications facilitate the transfer of knowledge of customer needs throughout NOAA, and knowledge of NOAA products and capabilities throughout the community.

What Can NOAA Do?

At both the regional and national level, NOAA can align its outreach efforts to strengthen existing and emerging partnerships and its communications efforts to respond more quickly and effectively to the highest priority needs of our regional customers. Within each region, NOAA can better combine and apply its regional scientific and technical capabilities with those of its partners. Across regions, NOAA can better integrate its national capabilities to improve their utility at different geographic scales. Working with its partners, NOAA can build awareness of the programmatic priorities and capabilities particular to each region while developing more effective solutions that leverage the unique strengths and assets of each partner.

A comprehensive approach to outreach and communications would improve NOAA's understanding of and relationship with the distinct partner and customer communities in each region, and would help NOAA effectively blend the regional dimensions of its national priorities with the distinct topography of customer needs in each region.

What Are the Desired Results?

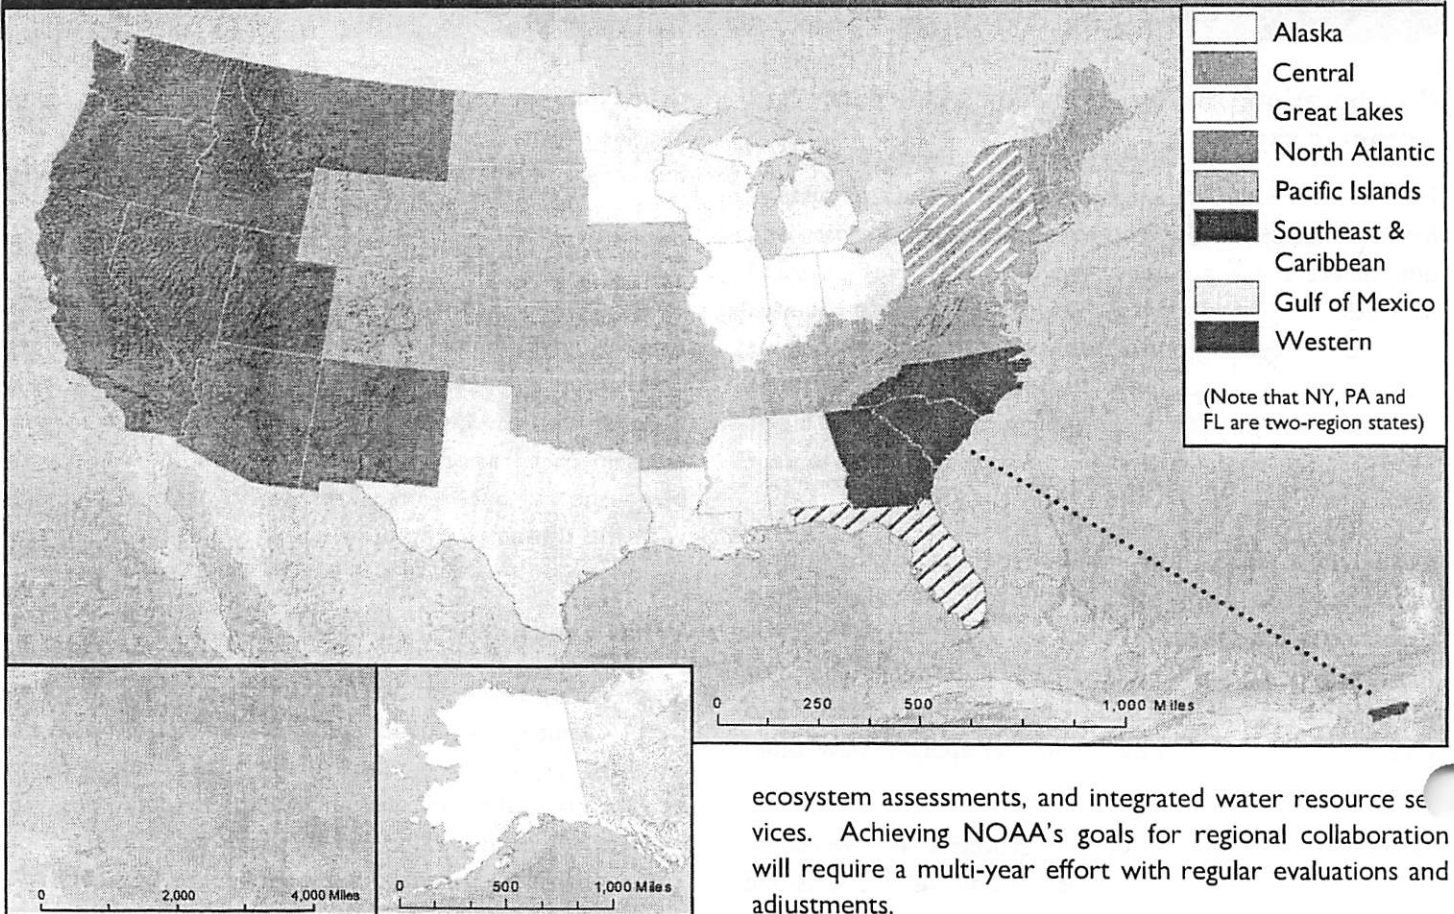

Effective outreach and communications will improve NOAA's ability to collaborate with numerous and diverse partners and customers, as required to meet regionally-specific environmental challenges and opportunities. Improved outreach and communications will yield a more comprehensive external understanding of how NOAA's capabilities can be deployed in combination with our regional partners' assets to maximize regional benefits and achieve NOAA's mission. Partners and customers will bring the full range of NOAA products to bear on a wider range of applications to make wiser decisions about the use of resources in the region. Greater collaboration with partners and customers also will yield integrated products that are tailored to meet specific regional needs.

The Framework for NOAA Regional Collaboration

NOAA has developed the regional framework below to foster stronger collaborative ties internally, and with its partners and customers.

ecosystem assessments, and integrated water resource services. Achieving NOAA's goals for regional collaboration will require a multi-year effort with regular evaluations and adjustments.

Why Regional Collaboration?

Regional Collaboration will improve our value to customers by identifying and applying NOAA's full range of capabilities, within and across regions. It will also allow us to design the best solutions to address geographically specific problems. This effort will use existing authority and accountability structures and does not entail changes to NOAA's organizational structure.

How Will Regional Collaboration Work?

NOAA's leadership is committed to Regional Collaboration as an approach to engaging partners and customers and delivering NOAA services. A senior leadership team has been established to guide the efforts of regional and priority area teams as they engage with external partners to develop and implement strategies that address the following priorities in the regions: hazard resilient coastal communities, integrated

How Was the Regional Framework Designed?

A NOAA-wide working group developed the geographic framework above as an initial, flexible basis for regional collaboration. The objectives were to promote "one NOAA" thinking, provide an organizing principle to encourage cross-NOAA integration, and provide focus for targeted, effective outreach.

The working group considered not only the existing structure of NOAA capabilities and existing regional partnerships, but also how our stakeholders work together and their opportunities for working with NOAA. It designed the regional framework with several explicit criteria in mind: public perception of regional identity, alignment with existing NOAA capabilities and with regional partners, ecosystem-related boundaries, federal and state jurisdictions, size-manageability of regions, and the geographic dimensions of the programmatic priority areas.

NOAA's Alaska Region

Extending to the Arctic, Alaska's culturally diverse people, infrastructure, economy, and ecosystems are already experiencing the effects of climate change. Obtaining a better understanding of these early impacts will provide an integration of science and decision-making for adaptation on a global scale.

Geography and Environment

Alaska, also known as "The Great Land" or "The Last Frontier," is surrounded by the Pacific Ocean, Bering Sea, Chukchi Sea, and the Arctic Ocean. While Alaska is geographically isolated from the contiguous 48-states it is internationally connected -- Alaska is the only state to border two nations. 99% of the land area is federal, state, local or native corporation land. Half of all U.S. parklands and 80% of all wildlife refuges are in Alaska.

Alaska holds many records and unique landmarks such as North America's biggest earthquake and tsunami (the 9.2 magnitude Good Friday Earthquake of 1964 and resulting 115 foot tsunami and the 1,733 foot tsunami in Lituya Bay in 1958), the Nation's greatest concentration of glaciers, North America's tallest mountain (Mount McKinley at 20,320 feet), the Nation's farthest-north city (Barrow), and more than 40 active volcanoes.

Social and Economic Context

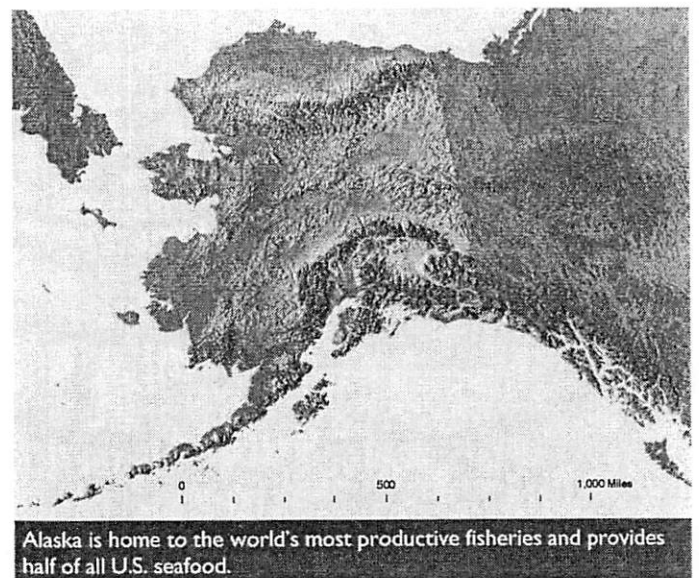

Alaska's strategic air- and waterways present challenges and opportunities in terms of homeland security and economic development. The Ted Stevens Anchorage International Airport is ranked first in the U.S. for landed weight of cargo aircraft, and third in the world for cargo throughput. Alaska's rich marine ecosystem has some of the most productive and sustainable fisheries in the world (~$4 billion in 2003, about half of the U.S. catches). The Bering Strait is a 53-mile wide chokepoint that links both the Northwest and Northeast passages to northern Asian, Russian, and European commerce. The Aleutian Islands are a major transit for the Great Circle Route linking commerce from the U.S. west coast to southern Asia. No other marine system in the U.S. has such extreme weather and climate (environmental hazards), vast geographic distances (larger than the combined U.S. marine system), and an extensive coastline (~44,000 miles).

Alaska has extensive oil and gas reserves essential to the nation's economy and national security. The Alaska Oil Pipeline loses approximately $1 million per hour during a shutdown.

Capabilities and Challenges

NOAA is leveraging and enhancing its diverse set of partnerships to proactively prepare for and respond to the potential immediate and future impacts of climate change on people, societal infrastructures, local/regional economies, and ecosystem changes.

Climate change is already impacting our environment, seasons and communities. Observable changes, many of which have regional and global implications, are underway across the Arctic. These changes are affecting the health, lives, and livelihoods of Alaskans, including the Alaska Native culture that is fundamentally threatened by climate change. NOAA is prioritizing and developing a baseline of observations to effectively monitor, evaluate, and assess climate change and variation in the Arctic Region. This includes the integration of the vertical datum and hydrographic surveys as a baseline. Assessing, monitoring, and predicting the responses of coastal and marine ecosystems in Alaska to the loss of sea ice and ocean acidification are primary initiatives. There are expanded opportunities and challenges in NOAA's marine ecosystems monitoring and management (fish and mammal). This includes tsunami monitoring, research, and inundation modeling.

Alaska is home to the world's most productive fisheries and provides half of all U.S. seafood.

Guiding Principles

- NOAA will advance its goals for regional collaboration through existing authority and accountability structures. This effort does not entail changes to NOAA's organizational structure
- The overarching purpose of regional collaboration is to improve NOAA's productivity and value to customers
- All those participating in this effort will strive to identify, acknowledge, and apply NOAA's full range of capabilities, within and across regions, as needed to improve NOAA's productivity and value to customers

ARCTic Integrated Services Assessment Goals

- Assess current NOAA services within Alaska Region (AR) with a focus on consistent services, technical standards, and service requirements.
- Strengthen and promote open relations with key stakeholders.
- Develop an approach for strategic product and service enhancements in concert with key partners and stakeholders.

Polar meltdown

Scientists sound alarm as change picks up speed

Arctic sea ice reaches only half as far as it did 50 years ago. In summer 2006, it shrank to a record low; this summer, the ice pulled back even more, by an area nearly the size of Alaska.

By DOUG STRUCK
The Washington Post

For scientists, global warming is a disaster movie. Its opening scenes set at the poles of Earth. The epic already has started. And it's not fiction.

The scenes are playing, at the start, in slow motion. The relentless grip of the Arctic Ocean that defined man for centuries is melting away. The sea ice reaching only half as far as it did 50 years ago. In summer 2006, it shrank to a record low; this summer the ice pulled back even more, by an area nearly the size of Alaska.

Where explorer Robert Peary just 102 years ago saw "a great white disk stretching away apparently infinitely" from Ellesmere Island, there is often nothing now but open water. Glaciers race into the sea from the island of Greenland, beginning an inevitable rise in the oceans.

Animals are on the move. Polar bears, kings of the Arctic, now search for ice on which to hunt and bear young. Seal, walrus and fish adapted to the cold are retreating north. New species — wal moose, caribou, even crows — are coming from the south. The hunt, who have lived on the frozen land for millennia, are seeing their houses sink into once-frozen mud, and their hunting trails on the ice are dotted with shambles.

"It affects everyone," said Carin Ashjian, a Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute scientist who spent early September with Inupiat in Barrow. "The only ice I saw this year was in my cup of the cafeteria."

At the South Pole, ancient ice shelves have already crumbled. The air over the winter's Antarctic peninsula has warmed by nearly 6 degrees since 1950. The sea there is heating as well, further melting edges of the ice cap. Green grass and beech trees are taking root on the ice fringe.

Antarctica's signature Adeli penguins are moving inland, seeking the cold of their ancestors, replaced by chinstrap and Gen-

Ecosystem Visions

- In 2015, commercial fishermen will be harvesting groundfish species north of the Bering Straits.
- By 2015, the North Aleutian Basin will be known as one of the largest oil and gas discoveries in recent times. By 2025, this region will become a major producer of oil and gas for the North American market.
- In 2015, NOAA will have enough information about the potential effects of ocean acidification on the Alaska marine ecosystems, and will be in a position to explore adaptive management techniques to mitigate adverse effects.
- In 2015, the U.S. EEZ will have been extended to the continental shelf break as a result of U.S. signing of the Law of the Sea Treaty.
- In 2015 NOAA will have substantially improved and integrated coastal ecosystem assessments to provide Alaska coastal managers with information and tools for scientifically-based decisions on resource management and coastal development planning.
- In 2015 NOAA will have new operational coastal observing system capabilities to provide Alaska coastal managers with the real-time and climatological information necessary for scientifically-based decisions on resource management and coastal development planning.
- In 2015 NOAA will have developed an initial ecological forecast capability to provide Alaska coastal managers with information and tools for scientifically-based decisions on resource management and coastal development planning.

Dear North Pacific Fisheries Management Council,

As concerned citizens and Greenpeace supporters, we are urging you to implement an ecosystem-based approach to fisheries management that accounts for the needs for all species that depend on pollock as their prey.

At a minimum, catch limits should seek to double in size the pollock population and maintain this higher level over time.

Many of the fish, seabirds, marine mammals and invertebrates living in the North Pacific and the Bering Sea rely on pollock as a source of food. Without enough prey they are starving and populations are dwindling. The entire structure of the ecosystem is being fundamentally changed. Marine reserves and more precautionary management strategies are needed now to turn the tide.

Please don't sit around while animals starve—reduce pollock catch limits and keep more forage fish in the seas for marine life.

Sincerely,

Copy of names (approximately 6,747) attached to letter are at Secretary's desk for review.
