RE: Gulf of Alaska Habitat Conservation

Dear Chair Kinneen and Council members:

Healthy ocean habitats are essential for fish populations and other marine life to survive and grow. As climate change threats become more present and alarming, protecting ocean habitats becomes even more necessary. We write to request that the North Pacific Fishery Management Council initiate a public process to protect essential fish habitats, particularly in the Gulf of Alaska.

The central and western Gulf of Alaska – spanning over 1,200 miles from Yakutat to the Aleutian Islands – is the last place off the Alaska coast where the Council has not already limited the bottom trawl footprint. According to the National Academy of Sciences, bottom trawling is the most destructive form of fishing on seafloor habitats. Bottom trawlers in Alaska also catch and often waste nontargeted salmon, halibut, crab and other species central to the lives of Alaskans.

Over the years the Council has championed ecosystem-based fishery management and a precautionary approach to habitat conservation. For example, the Council implemented a “freeze the footprint” approach to trawling in the Aleutian Islands. In doing so, the Council limited bottom trawling to areas where it was already occurring and protected important coral and sponge gardens. This protected more than 95% of the Aleutian Islands region, while still ensuring a robust groundfish fishery.

The same precautionary approach to bottom trawling is now the basis of NOAA’s National Strategic Plan for Deep-Sea Coral and Sponge Ecosystems.¹ It has been implemented in the Arctic Ocean, Bering Sea, and ocean waters off California, Oregon and Washington. Yet only 10% of the central and western Gulf of Alaska region is currently protected year-round from bottom trawling.

As you plan for climate ready fisheries and take actions to ensure the health of Alaska’s fisheries and oceans, you must continue to protect ocean habitats from bottom trawling. Importantly, the Council should take this opportunity now to freeze the trawl footprint and protect important ecological areas in the Gulf of Alaska. This should be achieved in a way that protects and enhances essential fish habitats while maintaining Alaska’s vital seafood industry.

At the February 2023 Council meeting please initiate a public process to amend the Gulf of Alaska Groundfish Fishery Management Plan to protect seafloor habitats and the deep-sea.

Sincerely,

661 Residents of Alaska, Washington and Oregon
