Possibilities for Organization of the Advisory Panel to the NORTH PACIFIC FISHERY MANAGEMENT COUNCIL

The exact relationship of the Advisory Panel to the Council has not been established. It is still in a formative stage and input is needed from both Council members, Advisory Panel members and the Scientific and Statistical Committee. Admiral Hayes and his staff have made some proposals in the form of revisions to the Charter of the Advisory Panel and a flow chart showing the development of Council management plans.

This suggests formation of working groups along management unit or plan lines, which appears to be feasible and probably desirable. It may also be desirable to think about forming sub panels cutting across management units, based on such things as suggested in the first working draft of the agenda for the third Council meeting, i.e.,

1. Perhaps a groundfish development subcommittee which could determine the interest and capability of the U. S. fishing fleet to harvest groundfish off Alaska. The areas that are likely to develop first and what elements of the fleet would probably be involved--would it be part of existing fishing capacity or would new units be expected in the fishery?

2. Determination of U. S. tanner crab capacity based both on the U. S. fisherman's ability to catch the resource, the processors' current capability for processing tanner crab, both as sections and meat, an assessment of U. S. ability to market large quantities of tanner crab. Are all three echelons of this production scheme equal and in synchronization?

3. The processing capability and problems involved in new fisheries--particularly those for groundfish and tanner crab. What capability is now available? What can be expected to be available in the immediate future? Where does the processing industry need help in technology, financing, etc, in order to get these fisheries started in Alaska?

4. Marketing capability--a working group to assess the current and future marketing capability for finfish in all of the various forms in which it can be processed.
The text on the page is not legible due to the quality of the image.
5. Definition of OSY—using available material and working with members of the SSC, try to develop parameters for consideration by the Council.

6. The subsistence fisheries—a sub panel to define the important subsistence fisheries that may be influenced by Council management plans, how can they best be protected? Are there alternatives?

7. A working group on limited entry to study its merits, demerits, problem areas, etc.

Numerous problems can be identified that need the input of the members from the Advisory Panel, the Scientific and Statistical Committee and the Council. The members of the Advisory Panel are particularly well qualified in the socio-economic area to give advice and direction to the Council, and are probably in the best position of anyone in the Council structure to determine if a management plan is practical or not.

The Advisory Panel Charter can be revised to reflect whatever working method is decided on, the only problem is putting our heads together to work out an efficient structure. of the Committee, in the capacity of the President of the SEC, in his capacity as chairman of the Committee, and in his capacity as a member of the Committee.

He mentioned that the Committee had been working on several important issues, including the regulation of the securities market. He also discussed the need for greater transparency and accountability in the financial sector.

In conclusion, he emphasized the importance of the Committee's role in ensuring the stability and integrity of the financial market. He expressed confidence in the Committee's ability to address the challenges facing the market and to promote a fair and transparent system for all investors.

The Committee, in its meeting, also discussed the need for greater cooperation between regulatory bodies to enhance the effectiveness of their supervision.

The President concluded by thanking the members of the Committee for their dedication and hard work.
Notice is hereby given of a meeting of the North Pacific Fishery Management Council Advisory Panel established by Section 302 (g)(2) of the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976 (P.E.L. 94-265). S. fishing industry will harvest the resources considered in the management plans and the effect of such management plans on local economies and social structures.

This is the first meeting of the Advisory Panel and they will deal with organizational matters and assist the North Pacific Fishery Management Council in review of management plans.
